What does it mean for immigration enforcement to be humane?

How do state policies measure up to standards of humane enforcement?

Principle 1. Liberty: Enforcement systems should have a presumption against the deprivation of migrants' liberty, giving preference to dignified alternatives to formal detention and ensuring that families are neither detained nor separated.

Principle 2. Living & Reception Conditions: Accommodations for migrants, whether in reception facilities or, where applicable, in detention centers, should be dignified and should provide for basic needs and access to appropriate resources.

A photograph of a border crossing. In the foreground, a man in a maroon shirt and blue jeans is walking away from the camera. To his left, a white SUV is stopped at a metal barrier. In the background, there are two flagpoles: one with the Mexican flag and one with the American flag. The sky is overcast. A chain-link fence runs along the top of the scene.

Principle 3. Information & Accompaniment: Migrants should be provided legal and other forms of guidance, information, and assistance throughout the enforcement process, so as to maintain their agency and dignity as individuals as well as ensure higher levels of compliance with immigration proceedings.

Principle 4. Efficiency & Individual Assessment: Determinations of asylum and immigration status should be conducted in a timely individualized manner that respects due process.

A new team of Keough graduate students will travel to Central America in 2020 to conduct research on post-deportation reintegration programs. What, in your view, should be the guiding parameters of their research?
